

THE QUICK AND DIRTY GUIDE TO LEARNING LANGUAGES
FAST

A.G. HAWKE

THERE ARE MANY REASONS why you might need to learn a foreign language quickly—perhaps an unexpected business trip or a sudden travel opportunity. A.G. Hawke, a U.S. Army Green Beret, often travels to foreign countries on short notice and has to be able to work intimately with officials who do not speak English. Frequently, he needs to be able to communicate in a foreign language in a matter of days or weeks. He tried all types of schools, classes, books, and tapes, but none delivered what he needed when he needed it. So he developed his own method for learning languages. It proved so effective for him (he is certified by the military in seven languages) and his fellow Green Berets that he decided to share it with others who are struggling to learn a foreign language on the quick.

The Quick and Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast is designed for people who have no interest in learning complicated rules of grammar. Hawke promises that his method will help anyone become functional in any language in as little as seven days and proficient in 30 days. How? Because he has trimmed the fat for you, freeing your time for what's truly useful. Hawke provides a detailed day-by-day schedule, a hands-on workbook format, and secret tips to help you master the key elements of any new language. In true Special Forces style, this quick-and-dirty method contains no fluff; it's all action so you can quickly get into the action yourself.

If your mission is to learn a foreign language, why not learn how from the very best?

A PALADIN PRESS BOOK

ISBN 1-58160-096-8

Visit our Web site at www.paladin-press.com

THE QUICK AND DIRTY
GUIDE TO LEARNING
LANGUAGES FAST

A.G. HAWKE

Paladin Press • Boulder, Colorado

The Quick and Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast
by A.G. Hawke

Copyright © 2000 by A.G. Hawke

ISBN 1-58160-096-8

Printed in the United States of America

Published by Paladin Press, a division of Paladin Enterprises, Inc.
Gunbarrel Tech Center
7077 Winchester Circle
Boulder, Colorado 80301 USA
+1.303.443.7250

Direct inquiries and/or orders to the above address.

PALADIN, PALADIN PRESS, and the "horse head" design are trademarks belonging to Paladin Enterprises and registered in United States Patent and Trademark Office.

All rights reserved. Except for use in a review, no portion of this book may be reproduced in any form without the express written permission of the publisher.

Neither the author nor the publisher assumes any responsibility for the use or misuse of information contained in this book.

Visit our Web site at www.paladin-press.com

CONTENTS

THE PRELIMINARIES

Introduction	1
Overview	5
Before You Begin	7
Your Language Toolbox	9
Key Words for Words	13
The Magic of Talking Back	19

PHASE 1: THE BASICS

(Days 1–7)

One Day at a Time	23
Day 1	29
Outlining Your Notebook	30
Day 2	33
Greetings, Basics, and Emergencies	34
Common Expressions	37
Day 3	41
Pronouns	41
Key Verbs	46
Key Nouns	57

Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Day 4	73
Conjunctions	74
Adjectives	77
Adverbs	85
Prepositions	93
Day 5	97
Synonyms	98
Antonyms	103
Numbers, Time, Weather	107
Commands/Imperatives	111
Days 6 and 7	115
Grammar	116
Past-Tense Rules	116
Present-Tense Rules	127
Future-Tense Rules	138
A Final Note on Verbs	147
Case	148
Gender	149
Number	149
Articles	149
Possession	149

PHASE 2: EXPANDING YOUR VOCABULARY

(Days 8–30)

Adding New Words and Phrases	153
Creating Your Own Cheat Sheet	155
Recommended Resources	157
Learning Tips	161
Appendix: Reproducible Forms	163

THE PRELIMINARIES

AUTHOR'S PREFACE

Most species communicate, but only humans have developed their communication skills to the degree that they can differentiate complexities with intricate detail. People can then convey these communications in print, audio, video, electronic, or other forms. Likewise, as is our primary concern in this book, people can communicate these thoughts in other languages to serve them as they travel the world or interact in their own world with others who speak different languages.

Regardless of why and how languages developed and differentiated, they did so. We now have a world with a few very common languages and a vast multitude of less disseminated tongues that are, no doubt, just as important to those remote people as English is to the business world.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Whether a person travels for business, resources, knowledge, or just for pleasure, he must accept that his travels will require him to interact with other humans and that this interaction will require a common language to communicate. Therefore, before embarking on any foreign travel, any wise person would do well to learn enough of the language spoken in the area to be visited to enhance his experience.

I wish you all the best in your travels or studies, whichever the case may be. I only know that you can never go wrong using your time to study, particularly languages because they offer you the greatest opportunity to reach out and touch someone. But languages also provide you with an opportunity to be touched. This is life.

I hope you find this book to be as useful for you and your loved ones as I have found it to be for me and my "Brethren." Enough talking—I leave you with this thought, or something sufficiently similar, that I heard somewhere during my travels: "He who learns another language earns another soul."

—A.G. Hawke

INTRODUCTION

There are many reasons why you might need to learn a foreign language quickly, as well as many reasons why you might not have studied one before. None of this is really pertinent here, except to point out that there are many ways of learning another language, but very few seem to be truly fast and effective.

The reason I developed this quick and dirty method of learning a foreign language is that, as a Green Beret, I had to travel to many countries on short notice on vital missions with complex requirements that required me to work intimately with foreign officials in a professional capacity. Regardless of how hard I searched, I could never find one book or method that got me where I needed to go in the time I had to get there.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

For my first foreign language, I was trained at the Defense Language Institute (DLI) in Monterey, California, where I learned the basics of study. The DLI teaches some very difficult languages, and quickly, to a lot of people, but it still operates on the premises that it takes 6 to 18 months to learn a language and you always begin at the beginning and proceed step-by-step through the course.

The real world, unfortunately, has some rather unreal demands and expectations, and Special Forces have to operate in the real world. But they don't call us "special" for nothing. We are just regular guys who rise to the occasion, adapt to the situation, and overcome the obstacles. Being quiet professionals, Green Berets don't quibble when given a mission. We just set about accomplishing it.

So I decided to tackle the problem of quickly becoming proficient—or at the very least adequate—in a language the Special Forces way. One of the first things you learn as a Green Beret is to stick to principles as much as possible. Techniques are variable, depending on the situation, but principles hold true through it all. So, when Uncle Sam came to me and told me to take this, go there, and do that, I stuck to the principles. I assessed the situation and decided that I couldn't learn the languages quickly enough with the instruction I had available. I needed to modify the program and adapt it to the specific needs of the mission. The adaptation came in the form of throwing everything out and starting over.

This technique violates the principles, you say? In fact, it doesn't. It sticks to the K.I.S.S. principle—keep it simple, stupid. You don't need to build a fortified defensive position when what is really needed is quick shelter from the storm! Or, in this case, if you don't need to practice law in the tongue you're trying to learn, you don't need to spend five years studying the ancient dialects to get ready to begin studying the language.

To develop my specialized method of instruction, I built backward, the way you're supposed to plan. First, I figured out what was needed and then how to get it as quickly and efficiently as possible. Using this method I have become officially rated in seven languages: Russian, Spanish, French, Italian, German, Serbo-Croatian, and Turkish. I used many of these languages within weeks of beginning to study them and served as the official interpreter on our missions. In addition, with a little research and effort, I was able to create summaries for the other members of my Special Forces team so that they too could function with a day of study.

Introduction

From these summaries, I wrote this book so that you could learn a foolproof way of conquering a foreign language. It works for any language—from the more common Romance languages, such as French or Spanish, to the more exotic tongues, such as Arabic, Russian, or Japanese. For the less familiar languages, you will need to select and use a very good guide or dictionary in conjunction with this guide.

You know your mission, whether it's for travel, business, or just speaking with a friend. Your objective is to conduct your mission in the language required. Your goal is to obtain the instrumental tool needed, which is the language itself. Your parameters are to do all this in the time allocated. Reasonably, I suggest one week to one month.

Now that you have all this lead-in and everything has been spelled out clearly in military-style terminology, let's discuss a few details about my quick-and-dirty method of learning a language before we get operations under way. The basic premises taken for this book are as follows:

- You were not raised speaking more than one language.
- You have not had the opportunity, or perhaps the desire, to learn another language.
- You have either never had formal training, or you have found it inadequate for your needs.
- You need, for whatever reason, to learn a foreign language quickly.
- You need to be functional in the language, but perfection is not your immediate concern.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

No amount of time and money could ever be set aside to train everyone in everything they might ever need. Yet, the very success of missions frequently comes down to the ability to communicate in a language different from our own. No books, no schools, no courses ever seemed fully up to the task . . . until now.

Do not kid yourself: you still acquire a language the good, old-fashioned way—you have to learn it. But here I have trimmed the fat for you and gotten down to brass tacks. No fluff, all action words, so you can get into the action yourself.

Now, let's do it!

OVERVIEW

This overview will help you use the methodology in this book most efficiently and effectively. The concept is quite simple: get rid of everything that is not absolutely necessary and then focus on the most useful tools to get the job done. That is what you will be doing shortly.

First, you will prepare yourself by getting your equipment ready. Second, you will organize yourself and the use of your time. Third, you will embark on your route according to the plan provided. Fourth, you will apply yourself regularly and test yourself daily to note deficiencies and determine your focus. Fifth, you will build on this foundation and implement your plan by using these “word” tools every way you can.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

You should pay special attention to the "Learning Tips" scattered throughout the text for your convenience and listed at the back of the book. These are the quick secrets to learning a language quickly and effectively.

By the time you've followed these directions, completed the outline, filled in the blanks, used the words, and applied your imagination and creativity, you will be speaking the language you have chosen to learn. It will happen. Envision it. See yourself speaking it. Hear yourself speaking it. You are mere steps away.

Bon voyage!

BEFORE YOU BEGIN

Watch movies, read children's books, listen to music, and go to restaurants to get an insight into the culture and nuances of your target language.

To really learn a language fast, there are some techniques that I find more helpful and enjoyable than those used in old-fashioned—and harder—methods of study. I think you'll enjoy these accelerated methods as well. The key is to immerse yourself in the desired language as much as you can. To do that, it helps to get into the culture as well.

1. Think like the people who speak the language natively, act like them—it will help immensely.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

2. Find music of that culture and in that language and listen to it as much as possible.
3. Watch movies in the language as well. Subtitles help a lot but are not critical. You are trying to get a feel for the language: how native speakers stress and where they stress, their intonation and annunciation of syllables, etc. Study their mannerisms and gestures. This is a tremendous—and pleasant—method of determining if their language is animated or subdued. These subtleties will clue you in as to how to interact more propitiously with the natives. This, in turn, will make them respond to you more favorably, thus encouraging you to continue your studies and encouraging them to assist you—which ultimately will serve to enhance your overall learning.
4. Eat in their restaurants. Try to order food in their language.
5. Look in your local papers and find their cultural events. Attend them and make some acquaintances who might be willing to help you with the language.
6. Of course, listen to the CDs or tapes you acquired as much as possible (e.g., in the car on the way to work or whenever you can fit it in). Bombard yourself with your new language. Tell yourself you love it, even when you're sick and tired of it. Smile, breathe, and keep listening.
7. Read kids' books, newspapers, and magazines in that language, and surf the 'Net. By the way, kids' books are wonderful tools for learning a language. Don't be embarrassed. Remember that you're on a mission—once you're rapping in the lingo, it doesn't matter how you got there. You will appreciate your skills, and others will also.
8. Find a friend (maybe a romantic one if you're single) who does not speak English very well, because if he or she does you will revert to the language that is easier for both of you. To begin your study, you'll need a few tools.

YOUR LANGUAGE TOOLBOX

1. Get a good writing pen and notebook that you can dedicate to this one language. (Because the forms at the back of the book are reproducible, you might want to use a three-ring notebook instead of a bound one. This way you can take the pages out whenever you like, organize them however you wish, and put them back. Plus, you won't have to carry the whole notebook if you don't want to, only the lessons you need for that day or specific situation.) You will carry the notebook for a while, use it a lot, and save it for a long time, so be sure to buy a high-quality one that will last through the abuse it's bound to receive.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

2. Next, you will need at least two books for the language you want to study: a dictionary and a phrase book. If you are going to be traveling, the smaller these books are, the more likely you are to carry them, and if you carry them, the more likely you are to use them. If you're not traveling, buy the biggest, nicest dictionary you can afford because you will learn much more from a large dictionary than a smaller one.

The phrase book is a bit trickier to select because anyone can make and sell them—and they often do. You do not need a book that will teach you how to say, "I would like to go to the market and buy a nice, fresh, pink piece of pork," or "Can you fix my flat as it seems to have been damaged by a nail?" No doubt, there may be a time when you might need to say one of these phrases, and there is probably at least one person out of every million people who would express themselves in this way. However, what is more suited to your needs is to find a phrase book that gives you common expressions that serve a variety of purposes.

The concept behind acquiring tools is simple. Yes, you can buy a very expensive tool set with gadgets galore that were made specifically to fix other gadgets, and although they might be handy once in your life, they otherwise take up space and cost money. You need very few tools that will fix most anything. Then, if you decide you need more tools because you like "mechanicking" or you just have to keep working with tools, you can slowly acquire more as needed. The same applies to your language tool kit. Seek those words and phrases that will give you the biggest bang for the buck, the ones you can use the most.

Choose your phrase book based on this concept. Take a few moments and look through all those available to you. Shop at a few stores if you need to. Look for the basics, such as greetings and terms of politeness. Then look to see if everything is broken down into categories:

Your Language Toolbox

food, medical, directions, etc. The books should give you the words by themselves and then the phrase that you'll most likely use. The simpler the phrase the better because you can combine phrases or add and subtract words more easily without making grammatical errors that might make you quite incomprehensible. I have found Barron and Berlitz phrase books to be the best. Again, you are going to write down phrases you think will be useful in your own study book.

3. Another useful tool, but one that may not be so easy to find, is a set of flash cards or a grammar book. The flash cards are often available for Romance languages, but if you can't find them or don't want to buy them, make your own. You can learn more words faster and reinforce learning as you go. The commercial flash cards and phrase books are usually called the "fundamentals of Spanish," or whatever language they are about. Each foreign-language phrase book or dictionary usually has a grammar section in it, so you might not need to buy a separate one. Find one that breaks the language down to its simplest components.

A really neat trick for learning the grammar of another language is to do just like children do—get a kids' grammar book for that language. Grammar will tell you how to put the sentences together the way they do, as well as those little things you need to know for each group of words such as tenses, cases, and conjugation.

4. An optional tool that is quite helpful if you have absolutely no idea how the language sounds is a compact disk (CD) or tape. Again, use your best judgment based on the above-listed criteria for selecting these. The "rain in Spain falls mainly on the plain" is nice to know but doesn't mean much when you need help on the streets. (And you can make your own tapes or CDs as well. This is cheaper and allows you to tailor them to your needs. Plus you can alter them to reflect your progress. When making the tapes, be sure to leave a pause after each word or phrase to give you time to pronounce it.)

Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Since most people learn better by visual means, books are more the focus of our orientation here. However, some folks find it easier to study with audio aids. If you do, apply the same techniques and schedule outlined here for books.

The principles are the same: find the tools and study. The techniques are up to you. You know yourself, so adapt those that work best for your personality.

Now let's learn a few key words. . . .

KEY WORDS FOR WORDS

I know, I know, you're dying here and saying, "I have to learn grammar terms! What the heck! Over?!" No worries, these terms are mostly for you to read once and basically forget. Most of them will be readily apparent to you or will refresh your memory from school.

The primary reason for this section is so we can have a mutually agreed upon foundation and point of reference. There are a few techniques that will require you to know some of the terms listed below so you can apply them to the way you construct a sentence or phrase. Likewise, if you find yourself studying another language or continuing your study of the same one later on, you'll find these very helpful.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

So, let's look at a few key words for words!

Adjective—The description of the noun (e.g., smart, big, expensive).

Adverb—Describes the verb itself (e.g., slowly, quickly, over, under).

Learning adjectives and adverbs is greatly enhanced by learning them in opposite pairs (e.g., hot/cold, quickly/slowly).

Antonyms—Words that are opposites, such as good and bad, hot and cold. (Learn as many of these simple words as you can, and you will be able to put them with one verb and one noun and convey just about everything you could ever want or need. The trick is to always think about what you want to say, very quickly and then shorten it to its simplest construction. "The food is good/the food is bad" will serve you very well. You might not be able to tell that it is good because you love garlic or bad because you're a vegetarian, but the basic thought is conveyed.)

Articles—In the English language, the, a, or an tells us if something is specific or general. Note that many languages, such as Russian, do not have articles.

Case—The name for the general rule that causes declension is case. In English, if something is just there, doing nothing and nothing is being done to it, this is nominative case just because it's there. If something is being given to something or someone, this is accusative case because one is the direct recipient of action from the other. There are many names for cases. Each language will have its own cases and rules for them. The point here is that you should have an idea what these words like case mean, so you can read the rules yourself and know what is being talked about and not be lost in terminology.

Key Words for Words

Learn to use cognates to maximize your useable vocabulary.

Cognates—Cognates are words that are related by descent from the same ancestral language and usually are similar enough that you can recognize what they mean simply by looking at the root. For example, passion is passion in English and French; the English to pass is passer in French, close enough to know what it means by the way it looks and reads and often by the way it sounds once you've learned a few things about your desired language. Many Latin words have cognates. Even the most complex ancient languages or the simplest, rarest, or most remote languages also use them, especially with regard to modern words such as computer and telephone.

Conjugation—Learning conjugation is challenging because you must learn the rules for changing a verb to match the pronoun and the tense. For example, in English, we usually just say the verb or add the letter "s," such as I give, he gives. But many other languages have a separate ending for each pronoun group.

Conjunctions—Conjunctions are just what they say they are—words that join, such as if, and, but, or.

Declension—The inflection of nouns, adjectives, and pronouns; the change of the ending undergone by these sentence parts to express their different relations of gender, person, number, and case. This is when a root word must be changed by the rules to reflect a thought. For example, in Russian dom (pronounced dome) is home. To go home is domoy. Hence, in English we would use the word to to convey the thought; in Russian the word itself is changed based on the verb used with it and the rules of that verb. This concept is called declension.

Gender—Some languages confer a gender to each noun such as masculine, feminine, or neuter, and the articles or adjectives must reflect this (e.g., el hombre, not la hombre.)

Gerund—Verb forms that function as nouns. In English, gerunds end in “ing” (e.g., swimming, running).

Imperfective—A verb form or aspect expressing that the action is ongoing and therefore not perfectly and simply completed. For example, “I was reading the book while he was cleaning.”

Interrogatives—Absolutely the most important words to learn initially, interrogatives are the questions: who, what, when, where, why, and how. In a foreign language they can say so much and get you so much information and assistance. Combined with a good attitude, a creative approach, and a strong reliance on hand and arm signals, interrogatives will be very helpful.

Noun—Any object, person, place, or thing (e.g., man, home, car) that can serve as the subject of a verb.

Numbers—Numbers can be very difficult, complex, and, quite honestly, boring to learn. If you simply learn the numbers, 1 through 10, then the 10s up to 100 (20, 30, etc.), and the word for 1,000, you will most likely be able to handle all you need—unless, of course, you are going to work as an accountant. You can always use a calculator or pen and paper in the office or your fingers in the market. In fact, many calculators have functions that show how to convert from one currency to another. When you’re trying to get down to the nitty-gritty, this is one place to chop some time real fast and get on to more useful words that cannot be so easily substituted or signed in a pinch. A very subtle but important point to remember here is that when using your fingers to indicate numbers, be sure to study the customs of the country you are to visit. Sometimes a simple and innocent hand gesture can produce a great deal of grief in your life.

Perfective—A verb form or aspect expressing that an action was either quick and therefore momentary, or that it was or will be completed and, hence, is perfect. For example: “I read the book and then left.”

Key Words for Words

Plural—More than one.

Possession—Ownership of something. This is expressed differently in various languages. For example, in English it is Joe's book. In Spanish, it would be the book of Joe. In Russian, the word Joe is changed to show the book belongs to him. In some languages, it might be word sequence and position or stress and intonation of the syllables that tell the status and relationship of one word to another.

Prepositions—These little words make all the difference when you begin linking nouns or pronouns (that serve as the object of the proposition) to the rest of the sentence. Examples in English are by and to. In many languages prepositions determine when you must change a word and how to do so by their rules.

Present participle (present progressive)—In English, a verb that ends in ing and takes a helping verb (I am running).

Pronoun—These are words that take the place of nouns and refer to nouns (e.g., I, you, he, she, it, we, they).

Singular—Just one.

Syllable—This does not mean a part of a word, as in English. In the "syllabic" languages (such as Chinese, Arabic, and Cherokee), a syllable is closer in meaning to a letter or a series of consonant-vowel groups together that make one word mean something different than another.

Rely on synonyms to express the greatest number of ideas with the least amount of vocabulary.

Synonyms—Words that are similar (e.g., build and construct). Here is a big key: if you know the foreign word for to construct but want to say the word for to build but don't know it or can't recall it at the moment, use the word for to construct. It won't be perfect, but it will convey your thought and intention. Remember that the native speaker probably does not know your language and therefore will appreciate your attempt at using his. If he doesn't, he should. The point is, everyone will know that you're not a native. Perfection will come later if you care enough to work for it. Right now, just go for it and try!

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Tense—The time distinctions that verbs express. In English, there are six principal tenses: present (I go), past (I went), future (I will go), present perfect (I have gone), past perfect (I had gone), and future perfect (I will have gone). Each of these has a set of progressive forms (e.g., I am going, I was going, I will be going). Various languages distinguish tenses differently.

Verb—A sentence part that indicates action (e.g., go, give, think) or links subjects with other parts of the sentence (e.g., is, was, am).

There are many more grammatical terms that you will come across, but these are most pertinent for your study. The bottom line up front (or BLUF as we call it) is this: if you use this format and fill in the blanks in the workbook pages as best you can by adapting your target language to complete the concept here, you will have what you need to function in your desired language immediately.

THE MAGIC OF TALKING BACK

A great technique for communicating is very simple: get the person to speak to you on your level. Wherever you travel, many people have probably dealt with other foreigners like yourself. Most will recognize your limitations and simplify their speech to match your ability, much as we automatically gear down to speak with a child or someone who doesn't speak English well.

However, there will always be those with whom outside contact has been minimal or who are just slow on the uptake, and they won't speak slowly or simply. There will even be some who will simply repeat the same phrase over and over, with the only change being that they say it more loudly! But, never fear, we have a method for overcoming this as well.

Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

LEARNING
The most difficult part of communicating is listening/translating. So, slow the speaker down and repeat what he said in words you know to ensure that you understand what was said.

When you come across this fun and interesting dilemma, simply repeat to the person what you think he said to you, using words that you know. This puts what you are saying in the form of a simple question that requires only a yes or no answer. A nod of the head or grunt in the affirmative or negative seals the deal. For example, a man comes up to you and says some words to you and points to your car and then to an area across the street from where you are parked. You can't understand what he's saying, but your quick wit deduces that he is referring to your car and that place over there. You quickly review what he said in your mental audio recorder and recognize the words for car, no, here, and there. So, you ask him, "Car no here?" He replies, "No." You point across the street and say, "Car there, yes?" He says, "Yes." You now realize that this fellow is the local Johnny Law and you are parked in front of a hospital emergency exit. You've resolved a potentially nasty situation, as you hurry to move your car. Getting the idea? All right then, we're cooking with fire now.

PHASE 1

THE BASICS

(DAYS 1–7)

ONE DAY AT A TIME

Now that you have an idea about the terminology and tools, let's talk about how to use them and get down to the business of studying. Of course, the methodology presented here is merely my recommendation. Some students will need or want more; others, less. Adapt the methodology to meet your needs.

The objective of this book is to be generic enough to be applicable to any language. That's a tall order and, to my knowledge, has never been done. Therefore, I ask you to please understand that, as people often do, we can make generalizations (such as we all have eyes and ears and breath oxygen), but there are also exceptions—many of them. Therefore, you should look at the concept of what we're saying. Use your imagination in applying what you learn here. Throw out anything that doesn't work for you and modify or adopt any outside techniques that serve you well.

Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Now that you have an idea of how this method of study came about and your basic tools, let's talk about your study schedule. Remember that this is a general guideline here. Some of you will require a bit more time, but none should enter into this program expecting to use less. This is a commitment to yourself. Make the time.

I have set the goal of seven days to learn the basics and be considered functional. If you have the time and discipline to stick to the regime, you should be proficient at the end of a 30-day period using this outline.

Before we go any further, we need to clarify what we mean by the terms functional and proficient. Both are relative terms. It is your functionality and your proficiency based on what you intend to do with the language that should concern you. You must carefully define your needs, focus, and activities in the target language before determining functional or proficiency levels. For example, a Green Beret trainer would have different needs—and consequently a different focus—than a tourist. Identifying any special needs that you might have (e.g., knowing how to ask for directions if you are planning on driving, biking, or hiking alone) is also very important before embarking on this program.

Becoming functional depends on your individual needs, goals, and interests. The focus you choose in your study will be defined by these.

Next, you need to focus your energy on the task of learning a new language. Start every day with the language to be learned as your first thought, your priority, your mission. This focus method works for anything, so you can derive some benefit from it in other areas of your life besides language. Plus, you can study other languages after you learn the first one using this method. Think of all the benefits of being able to communicate with other people in their language and you should have ample motivation for becoming bilingual or even multilingual.

One Day at a Time

Each day use the same time quantities and sequences:

- 15 minutes reviewing everything up to that point, focusing on hard words.
- 15 minutes on five new verbs.
- 15 minutes on 15 new nouns and other supporting words.
- 10 minutes on grammar rules, with one major grammar rule per day.
- 5 minutes on five new phrases.
- 15 minutes review before you go to bed. Next to the first hour in the morning and occasional review throughout the day, this is the most important thing you can do.

When you wake up each day, try to recall as much as you can from the review the night before and then look at your work to see what you missed.

Do this every day for seven days and you'll have all you need to get started. "How is this possible?" you ask. Because I will give you the format of which words to study first. This will help tremendously and will be readily apparent once you see the list of words. You will know how they work and why it is so simple.

LEARNING LANGUAGE QUICKLY A PRIORITIZED FLOW CHART OF ACTIVITY

- Obtain the tools for your study—notebook, pen, dictionary, and phrase book (grammar book and audio tapes/CDs are optional).
- Research your study materials and organize your study schedule.
- Write down key words and phrases.
- Prepare your flash cards.
- Label common items in the target language.
- Dedicate one solid hour of structured study per day and 15 minutes of review before going to bed.
- Study and review mentally and with the use of flash cards whenever time allows.
- Immerse yourself in the language and culture by supplementing your study with music, videos, and children's books in the native language and by eating foods from that culture.
- Methodically scan the dictionary and list words that you find useful. Focus on cognates.
- Use free association and memory tricks to help remember vocabulary.

One Day at a Time

Day 1

1. Review all your newly purchased materials for a few hours and then take a break.
2. Sit down for about half an hour and outline your book pages by category.
3. Take another couple of hours to fill in and begin each page with the appropriate headings.
4. Dig through your material to find the words and phrases you have selected and fill them in (this will require the bulk of your time in preparation).
5. Consider the basic grammar points of your language as it pertains to just the basics of sentence construction. This will make your first week of study more fruitful. Then, when you review the material thoroughly at the week's end, you'll gain even more useful insights. It will be much like a small lightning strike.
6. Use this outline to construct your book and then go by the daily schedule as your guide.

Day 2

1. Greetings, basics, and emergencies (hello, good-bye, my name is, bank, hotel, doctor, police)
2. Common expressions (How are you? How much is that?)

Day 3

1. Pronouns (I, he she; mine, your, his)
2. Key verbs (to be, to go, to eat, to buy)
3. Key nouns (house, hotel, automobile, airport)

Day 4

1. Conjunctions (and, or, but)
2. Adjectives (good, hot, rainy)
3. Adverbs (slowly, quickly, under, over)

Day 5

1. Synonyms (furious/mad; happy/glad; helpful/useful)

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

2. Antonyms (hot/cold; slow/fast; good/bad)
3. Numbers, time, weather (1, 2, 3; 12:00; rain, hot)
4. Commands/imperatives ("Take me to the hotel."; "Wait here for me.")

Days 6 and 7

1. Grammar—Write as much down as you can stand on day six so that you can finish the rest on day seven. Use the rest of day seven to review all your work.
 - A. Past-tense rules
 - B. Present-tense rules
 - C. Future-tense rules
 - D. Case
 - E. Gender
 - F. Plural and singular (number)
 - G. Articles
 - H. Possession

DAY 1

Day 1

I have repeated the tasks from page 27 at the beginning of each day so you won't have to flip back and forth to refresh your memory each day.

1. Review all your newly purchased materials for a few hours and then take a break.
2. Sit down for about half an hour and outline your book pages by category.
3. Take another couple of hours to fill in and begin each page with the appropriate headings.
4. Dig through your material to find the words and phrases you have selected and fill them in (this will require the bulk of your time in preparation).

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

5. Consider the basic grammar points of your language as it pertains to just the basics of sentence construction. This will make your first week of study more fruitful. Then, when you review the material thoroughly at the week's end, you'll gain even more useful insights.
 6. Use this outline to construct your book and then go by the daily schedule as your guide. The initial day is the most difficult, both in terms of time required and the number of tasks to be accomplished.
-

OUTLINING YOUR NOTEBOOK

The first thing you should do is outline your notebook. (On this day you won't be filling in the phrases, just the categories in your notebook.) A good place to start is with polite words and greetings. After all, first impressions are important, and you want to be sure to know how to, at least, greet and say good-bye properly and leave people with a favorable impression. Also include basic and emergency words and phrases you might need right away. After these come common expressions, pronouns, key verbs, key nouns, conjunctions, adjectives, adverbs, synonyms, antonyms, numbers, time, weather, and commands or imperatives. Then list your rules and key grammar points.

Follow this outline and you will be off to a good start.

Common nouns are easily learned by labeling these objects around your home and office. Be sure to use easily removable stickers!

Add another hour for flash cards and one for labeling common items around the house or office. Then review the cards and labels throughout the day. Refer to your notes if you can; if not, do it in your head. Continually narrow your focus—each time you are sure you know a word, forget about it and focus on other words of the day that you are still having difficulties with.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

[illegible]

This is the basic matrix you will be using to fill in most of the words and phrases in this book. As you can see, you should fill in the category (noun, verb, greeting, emergency, etc., at the top), and then the word in English, the word in the target language, and the way you would pronounce it. You can photocopy it and use it over and over, place it in your notebook, or take it along with you as a cheat sheet. There is a blank, full-size form in the back of the book for you to make as many copies of as you like.

DAY 2

Day 2

1. Greetings, basics, and emergencies
 2. Common expressions
-

You get a lot more mileage out of the verb to live than the preposition from, which usually requires more grammar.

GREETINGS & INTRODUCTIONS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Hello
Good-bye
My name is
What is your name?
Please
Thank you
You're welcome
I'm sorry
Excuse me
Where is (the airport, the market)?
How do I get to (the hotel, bus station)?
Can you show me (where, what)?
Can you write for me (directions)?

GREETINGS & INTRODUCTIONS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Can you draw for me (a map)?
How do you say?
What is (this, that)?
Is it (near, time)?
Are you (happy, sad, tired)?
Do you have a car?
I live in (the United States, England)
My age is
How old are you?
Are you married?
Where are your parents?
When will it (happen, come)?

WORD/PHRASE

WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

COMMON EXPRESSIONS

This one is up to you as every country has such different colloquialisms. You should include all the ones you find interesting enough to want to either use yourself or be able to recognize. In the initial stages, try to keep them limited to useful and functional phrases. You don't need to know how to say, "Can you speak English?" If the person can, he will understand you when you ask in English!

Learn useful colloquial phrases and use them to supplement your basics to be more expressive.

Profanities

One thing I have observed is that many people will learn profanity more quickly and readily than any other aspect of a foreign language. I suggest that you skip these words altogether. The reasons are simple. First, when someone is upset with you and curses at you, you will know it by his voice and expression. You won't need (and probably don't want) to know what he's actually saying. Likewise, if the person is being sneaky and saying the words to you in jest, knowing them will only upset you. The fact is, there are very few people, despite their fluency in another language, a native speaker can't trick if that is his intention. In addition, you want to impress people with your goodness and wholesomeness.

Using obscenity does not serve you well as a foreigner, and it does not represent your homeland well. Yes, a few folks might get a kick out of it initially, but later they will view you as a bit primitive and low class. You might need these people's help later. Strange things can happen to anyone at any moment while traveling. So never be rude to anyone. You just don't know who the people might be or to whom they might be related! Instead, learn words and phrases that can serve you well. A good example is to say what a shame instead of damn. You can use this phrase anytime and never offend—and not to offend is your objective. In some countries, an offense might very well lead to imprisonment or worse. Think before you speak. This rule will help you in all things.

Jokes

Jokes can help quite a bit. If you can learn some short one-liners, these will not only help you to learn and exercise your memory, they will expand your understanding of how the foreign language works. In addition, they are a great way to make friends and cheer people up. This results in more assistance with your studies because people will want to be your friend and to help you.

Formal vs. Informal

Many languages have words that distinguish between formal and informal. That is, some verbs have a different conjugation or changing of the word to indicate if you are a friend or acquaintance with the person with whom you speak. I suggest skipping the informal altogether or at least putting it off until you are more comfortable with the language. You should be formal with everyone you first meet. Further, if you don't know the informal phrase, you won't use it, so you won't be able to offend anyone unintentionally.

Suppose in the town you are visiting the mayor befriends you to enhance his status. But if you address him informally as a peer or friend, he might suffer a great loss of face and be extremely embarrassed and upset. Remember, anyone you befriend will not be upset with you for only using formal expressions with him because he knows you are new to the language. If any person wants you to use the informal form of address, he'll let you know—and teach it to you.

COMMON EXPRESSIONS

[illegible]

WORD/PHRASE

WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

DAY 3

Day 3

1. Pronouns
 2. Key verbs
 3. Key nouns
-

If you can learn the key nouns/pronouns and verbs for the activities you will be doing in a country, you can communicate almost anywhere.

PRONOUNS

Pronouns are handy because they make speaking easier since you don't have to keep referring to the noun and they show possession in some languages (e.g., mine, your, his).

PRONOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I
You
She
He We
They Me
Him
Her
Us
Them
My Your

PRONOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
His Her
Ours
Their Mine
Yours
Theirs
Myself Yourself Himself Herself
Ourselves Themselves

PRONOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
No one
Anyone
Someone Everyone
Everything Anything Something Nothing These Those This That

PRONOUNS

[illegible]

KEY VERBS

In English, the verb doesn't really change much as you change subjects: I go, you go, he goes, she goes. However, in many languages the verb changes considerably. That is why they call the verb the infinitive form, meaning before changes. For the infinitive form you add the word to before the verb: to go, to see. Then it is conjugated (or changed) as he goes. All the verbs in this section should be considered as having the word to in from of them.

Using this key verb short list, you should be able to communicate most of the basic actions you need. There are a few blank forms at the end of the key verb section for you to add your own verbs that do not appear on this list. Also, you can make a list of additional verbs in phase 2, "Expanding Your Vocabulary," for verbs that aren't as commonly used.

In some languages, simple commands will help (e.g., tell me, show me, take me).

There are key things that must be memorized. The trick is to know verbs and nouns; the grammar will follow. Next come adjectives and adverbs.

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
(To) Come
Go
Eat Drink
Work
Buy Sell
Sleep
Play Give Take Think Believe

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Know*
Read
Write
See Watch
Look Hear Listen Smell Taste
Touch
Make Do

* Many languages have two words for this. One for people, and one for subjects.

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Have Need
Want
Cost
Break Learn Study Teach
Ask
Answer
Repair Fix
Wash

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Clean
Put (place)
Choose Happen
Live
Die
Find Lose Rest Drive Fly Sail Walk

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Run Ride
Stop
Stay
Hurry Understand
Can (be able to) Worry
Fear
Fall
Get up
Get (obtain)
Burn

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Hit
Hide
Find Enter Exit
Send Receive Win
Cost
Try Join Gather Decide

KEY VERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Desire Borrow Lend Owe Promise Rent
Use
Laugh
Cry Dream

KEY VERBS

[illegible]

[illegible]

KEY VERBS
WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

KEY NOUNS

Learning key nouns (or the nouns that are key to your communicating) is probably the single most effective thing you can do. After all, if you can utter the word for hotel, airport, or back in the language of the country you're visiting, you have communicated what you need clearly if not grammatically.

As with the verbs, there are blank forms at the end of the key noun section for you to add your own key nouns. Also you can make a list of less common nouns in phase 2.

When you are struggling with a word, try using memory keys, such as how a word sounds or what it looks like or reminds you of. If the word for milk sounds like cat, then think: a cat drinks milk. That will cue you to the sound of the word and help you to remember it if it doesn't in fact trigger the exact word itself right away. Be creative in associating whatever the tricky word reminds you of to what that word actually means. If a word doesn't look like something to you, then listen to it . . . take a few moments, play with it. Something will click, and then you'll have it.

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Person Place
Thing Man Woman Child
Hotel House Restaurant Airport
Bus station
Train station Airplane

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Train Bus Car
Bicycle Boat Taxi
Tree
Animal
Dog Cat
Bird
Fish Food

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Water
Meat
Chicken
Beef
Pork Egg
Coffee
Milk
Lunch
Breakfast Morning
Afternoon Night

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Evening
Day
Week Month
Year
Telephone Radio
Air Conditioner
Bed Room Kitchen
Bathroom/toilet
Table

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Chair
Window Door Floor
Walls Roof Ceiling Money Bank Market
Garage Street
Highway

KEY NOUNS
WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Map Paper
Pen
Sun
Rain
Snow Clouds
Doctor
Medicine Hospital Dentist
Face Head

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Jaw
Hair
Neck
Waist
Stomach/abdomen Leg Foot Knee
Ankle Thigh
Toe Arm
Hand

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Elbow
Finger
Eye Ear Nose Mouth Tongue
Tooth Clothing Shirt
Pants Dress
Underwear

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Shoes Belt
Coat Hat
Laundry Umbrella
Reading Glasses Cup Glass
Plate
Fork
Knife
Spoon

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Napkin
Bath
Sink/faucet Blanket
Pillow
Book
Office Building Color White Black
Gray
Yellow

KEY NOUNS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Orange
Red Blue
Green
Gold Silver Shape
Circle Square
Box
Rectangle
Triangle Height

[illegible]

WORD/PHRASE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

KEY NOUNS	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE
1. the 2. and 3. is 4. of 5. to 6. that 7. in 8. on 9. at 10. from 11. with 12. by 13. for 14. as 15. but 16. or 17. so 18. if 19. when 20. where 21. how 22. what 23. who 24. which 25. whose 26. whom 27. whenever 28. wherever 29. however 30. whether 31. because 32. since 33. until 34. after 35. before 36. while 37. as soon as 38. as long as 39. as far as 40. as much as 41. as little as 42. as good as 43. as bad as 44. as well as 45. as long as 46. as far as 47. as much as 48. as little as 49. as good as 50. as bad as 51. as well as 52. as long as 53. as far as 54. as much as 55. as little as 56. as good as 57. as bad as 58. as well as 59. as long as 60. as far as 61. as much as 62. as little as 63. as good as 64. as bad as 65. as well as 66. as long as 67. as far as 68. as much as 69. as little as 70. as good as 71. as bad as 72. as well as 73. as long as 74. as far as 75. as much as 76. as little as 77. as good as 78. as bad as 79. as well as 80. as long as 81. as far as 82. as much as 83. as little as 84. as good as 85. as bad as 86. as well as 87. as long as 88. as far as 89. as much as 90. as little as 91. as good as 92. as bad as 93. as well as 94. as long as 95. as far as 96. as much as 97. as little as 98. as good as 99. as bad as 100. as well as	1. the 2. and 3. is 4. of 5. to 6. that 7. in 8. on 9. at 10. from 11. with 12. by 13. for 14. as 15. but 16. or 17. so 18. if 19. when 20. where 21. how 22. what 23. who 24. which 25. whose 26. whom 27. whenever 28. wherever 29. however 30. whether 31. because 32. since 33. until 34. after 35. before 36. while 37. as soon as 38. as long as 39. as far as 40. as much as 41. as little as 42. as good as 43. as bad as 44. as well as 45. as long as 46. as far as 47. as much as 48. as little as 49. as good as 50. as bad as 51. as well as 52. as long as 53. as far as 54. as much as 55. as little as 56. as good as 57. as bad as 58. as well as 59. as long as 60. as far as 61. as much as 62. as little as 63. as good as 64. as bad as 65. as well as 66. as long as 67. as far as 68. as much as 69. as little as 70. as good as 71. as bad as 72. as well as 73. as long as 74. as far as 75. as much as 76. as little as 77. as good as 78. as bad as 79. as well as 80. as long as 81. as far as 82. as much as 83. as little as 84. as good as 85. as bad as 86. as well as 87. as long as 88. as far as 89. as much as 90. as little as 91. as good as 92. as bad as 93. as well as 94. as long as 95. as far as 96. as much as 97. as little as 98. as good as 99. as bad as 100. as well as

[illegible]

WORD/PHRASE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

DAY 4

Day 4

1. Conjunctions
 2. Adjectives
 3. Adverbs
-

As you recall, conjunctions are the joining words. In English, there are basically two types of conjunctions. Coordinating conjunctions (and, or, if, but) connect sentences, clauses, phrases or words. Subordinating conjunctions (although, because, after) introduce dependent (or subordinate) clauses.

CONJUNCTIONS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
And Or If But Nor With Unless Before Although However As Since Therefore

[illegible]

CONJUNCTIONS

[illegible]

ADJECTIVES

Adjectives turn plain nouns into descriptive ones, adding color and detail to speech. In English, adjectives can come before the noun or after the linking verb (the beautiful sunset; the sunset was beautiful), but both still modify the noun, sunset. Their placement varies with other languages.

There are three things that you can do to make learning adjectives easier:

1. Learn the suffixes that turn words into adjectives in the target language. These suffixes are usually listed in the appropriate section in a grammar book. They make building words from root stems very easy.
2. Learn the comparative and superlative forms of adjectives (good, better, best).
3. Learn adjectives in opposites for easier retention (hot, cold). (More on this in the section on antonyms.)

ADJECTIVES

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Good/bad
High/low
Large/small Thick/thin
Same/different Light/dark
Light/heavy Full/empty
Hot/cold
Pretty/ugly
Warm/cool
Many/few Short/long

ADJECTIVES

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
First/last
Above/below
Ahead/behind
In/out
Happy/sad
Fast/slow
Easy/difficult
Hard/soft
Wet/dry
Smooth/rough
Tight/loose Far/near Young/old

ADJECTIVES

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Weak/strong Left/right
Up/down
Under/over
Rich/poor

ADJECTIVES

[illegible]

ADJECTIVES

[illegible]

ADJECTIVES

[illegible]

ADJECTIVES

[illegible]

ADVERBS

An adverb typically modifies a verb, an adjective, another adverb, a preposition, a phrase, a clause, or a sentence. Adverbs typically express quality, place, time, degree, number, cause, opposition, affirmation, or denial. In English, the same word can often function as an adverb or adjective, such as high (the plane is high; the plane flew high). Adverbs can also serve to connect, and their function is sometimes confused with that of a preposition.

As with adjectives, the learning of adverbs can be furthered in three ways:

1. Learn the suffixes that turn words into adverbs. In English, adverbs are often formed by adding ly to an adjective (slow + ly = slowly).
2. Learn the comparative and superlative forms of adverbs (quickly, more quickly, most quickly).
3. Learn adverbs in opposite pairs when applicable for greater efficiency (quickly/slowly).

ADVERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Inside/Outside Opposite/beside Through Away
Now/later Probably Possibly Rather Instead Between About Only Again

ADVERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Very Never/Always Together Above all
At last Little Perhaps Each
Some Slowly/quickly
Fairly/unfairly (or fair/unfair)
Cheaply/costly
Rarely/often

ADVERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Early/late Straight
Fast/slow
Bright
Close Deep Direct Even First/last Hard/soft
High/low
Loud
Quick

ADVERBS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Right/left Right/wrong
Rough/smooth
Sharp
Tight/loose
Here/there
Everywhere/nowhere Anywhere
Somewhere
Never/always
Today/tomorrow/ yesterday
More/less

ADVERBS

[illegible]

[illegible]

ADVERBS

[illegible]

PREPOSITIONS

In some languages, including English, prepositions connect a noun, a pronoun, or a noun phrase to a verb (she drove by me), to a noun (the smell of fresh bread), or to an adjective (old in age). As you can see, many of the prepositions listed here can also function as adverbs in English, and that is true in other languages as well. So you have to note the word's use in a sentence to know whether it is functioning as an adverb or preposition.

PREPOSITIONS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
For In At By To On From With Within Among Around During Except for

PREPOSITIONS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Inside Opposite Beside Through Toward Unless While Instead of According to Between Against About

PREPOSITIONS

WORD/PHRASE

WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

DAY 5

Day 5

1. Synonyms
 2. Antonyms
 3. Numbers, time, weather
 4. Commands/imperatives
-

Beginning with day five we leave the primary parts of a sentence and go on to other nuances of language that can make learning a language either easier or harder for you, depending on the language itself and the way you approach it. My approach stresses learning only what you really need to know, based on your individual needs, and the simple rules that apply most of the time.

SYNONYMS

As stated in the “Key Words for Words” section, synonyms are words that are similar in meaning. Though differences may exist, they are so subtle as to be imperceptible to most people. We talked about synonyms when we were listing adjectives and adverbs, but synonyms can be nouns, pronouns, and verbs as well as adjectives or adverbs.

Anytime you find a synonym that is easier for you to remember than the real word you are searching for, substitute it. You’ll probably be close enough in meaning to get your point across. If your grammar book has a section for synonyms, use them to add to the your collection for memorization on the following pages or in your notebook.

SYNONYMS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Road/route
Country/nation
City/town
Work/labor Market/store
Automobile/car
Medium/average
Large/big Happy/glad Angry/mad
Restaurant/cafe

SYNONYMS

[illegible]

[illegible]

SYNONYMS

[illegible]

ANTONYMS

Antonyms are the opposite of synonyms—they are words with opposite meanings (hot/cold). As with synonyms, antonyms can be nouns, pronouns, and verbs, as well as adjectives and adverbs.

Always try to learn your words in pairs and you double your retention. For example, if you need to know the word for to draw, you should also look up the word for to erase.

We have already listed many antonyms in the adjective and adverb section, but use the following pages to record other pairs that you may need in your travels. Or you can list them in your notebook.

ANTONYMS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Friend/enemy
Late/early Hot/cold
Good/bad
Peace/war Friendly/mean
Clean/dirty
Agree/disagree
Pleased/displeased
Tired/rested

[illegible]

ANTONYMS

WORD/PHRASE

WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

NUMBERS, TIME, WEATHER

These are standard categories that every one focuses on. I put them here as a matter of protocol for those who want to learn them. However, I encourage you to ask yourself, “When was the last time I asked anyone for the time, what date it is, or how the weather is?” The weather words alone can kill ya. I say skip ‘em, but if you don’t want to, look up the ones you think are essential to your travels and include just those.

NUMBERS

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
1 (one)
2 (two)
3 (three)
4 (four)
5 (five)
6 (six)
7 (seven)
8 (eight)
9 (nine)
10 (ten)

[illegible]

WORD/PHRASE

WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

[illegible]

Day 5

COMMANDS/IMPERATIVES

You might need these for emphasis, especially with taxi drivers or other insistent vendors or service providers. Look up the rules for the language you wish to learn. If they are too complex, skip 'em. Just write down the key ones such as Stop!

COMMANDS/IMPERATIVES

WORD/PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
Stop!
Go!
Take me to the hotel.
Bring me the check.
Wait here.
Don't do that.
Shut up.
Answer me.

[illegible]

COMMANDS/IMPERATIVES

[illegible]

DAYS 6 AND 7

Days 6 and 7

1. Grammar—Write as much down as you can stand on day six so that you can finish the rest on day seven. Use the rest of day seven to review all your work.
 - A. Past-tense rules
 - B. Present-tense rules
 - C. Future-tense rules
 - D. Case
 - E. Gender
 - F. Plural and singular (number)
 - G. Articles
 - H. Possession
-

GRAMMAR

Learn to conjugate helping verbs (to be, to do, to have, to want) and use them with infinitives and gerunds to avoid having to conjugate every verb.

This is where it starts getting tougher, where you stop memorizing words and start learning something about the mechanics of the target language and why you make certain changes to indicate tense, case, gender, plurals, and possession. Again, remember that how much grammar you should learn depends on the level of functionality or proficiency in the language you need to accomplish your mission.

PAST-TENSE RULES

After present tense, probably the one you will use most often is past tense. Most of the time in English this is simple: work, worked. However, there are exceptions; these are called irregular verbs. See becomes saw in past tense. For these verbs (which it seems are always the most commonly used ones in any language), you have to list them and learn the various tenses. Learn as many as you can right away. The rest will come to you as you refer to your easy-reference chart.

If you don't want to learn the various forms of irregular verbs, you have a couple of options.

1. You can learn the rule for using helping or auxiliary verbs with the infinitive form of the verb (especially of to do) and use it whenever possible. For instance, I saw can be said with almost identical meaning as I did see.
2. You can try the little trick of using past participle with the helping verb have or be or both (she has looked or she has been looking). In most languages, participles are easily created for regular verbs. In English you usually add ed to the end of the word to form the past participle (work/worked). Other languages have different rules, but once you learn them, it's much easier than learning how to conjugate every verb.

Days 6 and 7

3. Even if it leaves a little to be desired in terms of grammar, you can always add an adverb to a sentence to indicate tense (e.g., "I buy yesterday" or "I pay next week" isn't correct, but it gets the point across).

Of course, not all languages will have all three options, but almost all will have at least one. If you learn to just one of these tricks, you'll master past tense in little time. Choose whichever option is easiest for you. As I noted earlier, the key to mastering a language (or any task, for that matter) is to use tried-and-true principles, and these are.

If you learn to conjugate only three verbs (to be, to do, to go) properly, in past, present, and future tense for all your pronouns, you will be able to say almost anything you will ever need—if not perfectly, then at least clearly. The reason this works is that because in almost every single language, when two verbs are used together, you don't conjugate the second verb. If you can only learn to conjugate one verb correctly, choose "I did."

PAST TENSE TO BE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	was
You	were
You (f, formal)	were
He	was
She	was
It	was
We	were
You (p, plural)	were
They	were

PAST TENSE TO DO

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	did
You	did
You (f)	did
He	did
She	did
It	did
We	did
You (p)	did
They	did

PAST TENSE TO GO

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	went
You	went
You (f)	went
He	went
She	went
It	went
We	went
You (p)	went
They	went

PAST TENSE TO HAVE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	had
You	had
You (f)	had
He	had
She	had
It	had
We	had
You (p)	had
They	had

PAST TENSE TO WANT

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	wanted
You	wanted
You (f)	wanted
He	wanted
She	wanted
It	wanted
We	wanted
You (p)	wanted
They	wanted

PAST TENSE TO SEE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	saw
You	saw
You (f)	saw
He	saw
She	saw
It	saw
We	saw
You (p)	saw
They	saw

PAST TENSE TO BE ABLE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	can
You	can
You (f)	can
He	can
She	can
It	can
We	can
You (p)	can
They	can

PAST TENSE TO MAKE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	made
You	made
You (f)	made
He	made
She	made
It	made
We	made
You (p)	made
They	made

PAST TENSE TO NEED

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	needed
You	needed
You (f)	needed
He	needed
She	needed
It	needed
We	needed
You (p)	needed
They	needed

PRESENT-TENSE RULES

Much of the same applies to present tense. If you know how to conjugate the magic three verbs (to be, to do, to go) properly in present tense, then you can say most anything you need: I am happy, I do work, I go to work.

There is also a nice trick you can do with present tense: use the present participle and you won't have to conjugate different verbs. In English, the present participle is formed by using a helping verb and adding ing to the main verb (I am reading). Other languages may form the present participle in different ways or call it something else.

PRESENT TENSE TO BE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	am
You	are
You (f)	are
He	is
She	is
It	is
We	are
You (p)	are
They	are

PRESENT PARTICIPLE TO BE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	am being
You	are being
You (f)	are being
He	is being
She	is being
It	is being
We	are being
You (p)	are being
They	are being

PRESENT TENSE TO GO

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	go
You	go
You (f)	go
He	goes
She	goes
It	goes
We	go
You (p)	go
They	go

PRESENT PARTICIPLE TO GO

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	am going
You	are going
You (f)	are going
He	is going
She	is going
It	is going
We	are going
You (p)	are going
They	are going

PRESENT TENSE TO HAVE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	have
You	have
You (f)	have
He	has
She	has
It	has
We	have
You (p)	have
They	have

PRESENT TENSE TO WANT

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	want
You	want
You (f)	want
He	wants
She	wants
It	wants
We	want
You (p)	want
They	want

PRESENT TENSE TO SEE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	see
You	see
You (f)	see
He	sees
She	sees
It	sees
We	see
You (p)	see
They	see

PRESENT TENSE TO BE ABLE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	can
You	can
You (f)	can
He	can
She	can
It	can
We	can
You (p)	can
They	can

PRESENT TENSE TO MAKE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	make
You	make
You (f)	make
He	makes
She	makes
It	makes
We	make
You (p)	make
They	make

PRESENT TENSE NEED

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	need
You	need
You (f)	need
He	needs
She	needs
It	needs
We	need
You (p)	need
They	need

FUTURE-TENSE RULES

As with the two primary tenses, you must ascertain which form of the future tense is the easiest for you to use. For example, in Spanish there are actually 17 cases. Many natives don't even know them all or how to use them properly. It's sad to say, but much the same is true in English. Most of us do not use correct English. The point is to find the form of future case verb rules that are easiest for you and write them down here. Do not worry if it is not perfectly correct.

The fact that you saying the verb in a future form will convey your intention and serve your purposes. In English, using the future tense makes conjugation very easy: I will go, he will go, she will go, they will go—everyone will go! But not all languages are quite this easy. After you learn how to form the future tense you can add a time frame to make your intentions more specific and clarify any misconceptions your sentence structure might have created (e.g., I will work tomorrow).

Learn I will and put this with the infinitive to solve most of your your problems.

FUTURE TENSE TO BE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will be
You	will be
You (f)	will be
He	will be
She	will be
It	will be
We	will be
You (p)	will be
They	will be

FUTURE TENSE TO DO

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will do
You	will do
You (f)	will do
He	will do
She	will do
It	will do
We	will do
You (p)	will do
They	will do

PRESENT TENSE TO MAKE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will make
You	will make
You (f)	will make
He	will make
She	will make
It	will make
We	will make
You (p)	will make
They	will make

FUTURE TENSE TO WANT

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will want
You	will want
You (f)	will want
He	will want
She	will want
It	will want
We	will want
You (p)	will want
They	will want

FUTURE TENSE TO BE ABLE

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will be able to
You	will be able to
You (f)	will be able to
He	will be able to
She	will be able to
It	will be able to
We	will be able to
You (p)	will be able to
They	will be able to

FUTURE TENSE TO NEED

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will need
You	will need
You (f)	will need
He	will need
She	will need
It	will need
We	will need
You (p)	will need
They	will need

FUTURE TENSE (FILL IN VERB)

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will
You	will
You (f)	will
He	will
She	will
It	will
We	will
You (p)	will
They	will

FUTURE TENSE (FILL IN VERB)

PRONOUN	WORD/ PHRASE	WORD/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUNCIATION GUIDE
I	will
You	will
You (f)	will
He	will
She	will
It	will
We	will
You (p)	will
They	will

A FINAL NOTE ON VERBS

You might want to consider making your verb lists so that all that is important is together on one page if possible so that it is easier for you to carry, reference, and study. Consolidating alone often tends to help you put things in relational perspective, which contributes to ease in memorization.

CASE

There are just no two ways about it. Case is probably the toughest aspect of learning another language because case really doesn't play that much of a role in English.

Case is the aspect of grammar that involves the inflection of nouns, pronouns, and adjectives that denotes the syntactic relation of these words to others in the sentence. In English, we normally use a word (such as a preposition) to indicate the relationship between words. For example, we would say, "I give that to you." In another language, such as Spanish, there is a rule that changes the verb to imply both the preposition and the noun or pronoun receiving the action. For example, in the phrase I give to you, the word that changes is you. The way the word changes is called the case. The rules might change depending on whether the word is singular or plural, whether the word is used as a direct object or an indirect object, or some other factor. Therefore, in a foreign language there could be many variations of one simple noun, instead of using one preposition or conjunction and one verb conjugation and tense.

Foreign languages often change all the adjectives to match the gender and number according to the rules of that case. This makes learning some languages challenging. If your target language has these complex rules for case, just accept the parameters and do the best you can. Fortunately, only a few of the most difficult languages for English speakers have these case rules. Just do your best to learn the case as you learn your key verbs and use them the best you can.

Don't be intimidated. Remember that many natives don't speak perfectly, and they don't expect you to. As we keep emphasizing, the important thing is to learn your key nouns and verbs and you will do fine.

GENDER

This is an obvious and important element of any language, but it is not critical to master. Most of the time, you'll know when you make a gender mistake by the shy or embarrassed chuckles you elicit. Try to learn the gender of the important nouns when you learn the noun itself. Many times this will be in the form of an article, pronoun, or adjective.

NUMBER

Number refers to whether a word is singular or plural. These are generally very easy to learn in most languages.

ARTICLES

In English, the articles are a, an, and the. Some languages use articles and some don't. If the language you are studying does, write them down and memorize them. Be sure to learn the rules for when the word is plural, feminine, or masculine. Some articles have feminine and masculine derivatives.

POSSESSION

Simple rules usually apply here. As we discussed in the section on pronouns, possession is sometimes shown by the use of a possessive pronoun (his book). It might also be indicated by the use of an apostrophe and an s added to a word (John's book), or a prepositional phrase (the book of John). In some languages it might involve the case rule of changing the noun to indicate its possession of an item.

Write down all the rules of possession in your target language. Review and select the easiest for you to learn. Summarize and make this part of your daily grammar review.

* * *

Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

That's the end of phase one. Be sure to review all your basics for 15 minutes everyday before you begin phase two. The words and phrases from the first week are the most important tools you'll need, and you must have them as your active vocabulary. That means you must know them inside out because they are what you will pull from every time you need to communicate, whether you're initiating or responding to communication.

PHASE 2

EXPANDING YOUR VOCABULARY
(DAYS 8–30)

ADDING NEW WORDS AND PHRASES

Now that you have finished the basics, you should be functional in your target language. Or at least as functional as you need to be as determined by your specific needs and focus. Now is the time to move on to expanding your vocabulary by learning new words and phrases, as well as to tackle some of the complexities and nuances of the language that you didn't bother with in phase one.

This phase is less structured than phase one. About the only specific daily tasks I suggest here are continuing your daily cumulative reviews and tackling the letters of the alphabet to incorporate new words into your vocabulary, as we have already discussed. You have approximately 22 days (days 8 through 30). (Hopefully, you didn't start your study in February—in which case you have only 20 days to cram!) In the Romanized alphabet (A through Z), you have 26 letters, so you'll have to double up on a few days.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

As we have already discussed, if your target language does not use the Romanized alphabet, you can divide your study into areas of activity, such as accommodations, transportation, dining out, socializing, shopping, sight-seeing, etc. Try to come up with one heading for each day remaining in the month.

Learn the words and phrases you think you will need in addition to the key ones you learned in phase one. Also learn any rules (e.g., for gender or case or conjugation) that apply as you learn the the new words or phrases.

CREATING YOUR OWN CHEAT SHEET

One last thing before you head out into the world to try your new language skills: a cheat sheet. Create an easy-reference sheet on one page (or back and front) of all the key words and phrases you think you will need most. The order that you list the key items is also up to you. Just make sure that you can glance at it and find what you need quickly.

Cheat sheets are very personal. What works for a tourist interested in sight-seeing and recreation won't be that useful for a businessman. And a bicyclist or backpacker would have completely different needs from someone who's staying in a hotel in the middle of a city.

Because you will use this a lot, at least at first, you might want to have it laminated so it will last.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

Another idea is to have a series of small cheat sheets for different occasions. For example, you might have a laminated card for dining out, another for getting around, and another for business customs. That way you could take just the ones you needed for your various excursions.

You might also take a tip from smart travelers who don't speak the language of the country they're visiting. They often have a native speaker write out a card or sheet of paper for them saying something like, "Take me to the Shangri-La Hotel," or "Take me to the Golden Lotus restaurant," with them before they venture out. That way they can just show the card to a taxi driver and get to their destination easily. You could prepare a series of emergency cards like this to meet your needs, whatever they might be. In any language, it's best to be prepared.

* * *

That's it. It sounds like a lot, and it is. Learning a language involves a lot of work. Many of us spend our entire lives learning even our native tongue.

Don't be frustrated or intimidated. Just follow the steps outlined in this book. Take it bit-by-bit, day-by-day, step-by-step. Each part will make sense alone and will contribute to the whole. Always refer to the down-and-dirty parts to get the real gist real fast, and your growing confidence will encourage you to fill in between as you go.

Good luck and write to me in care of the publisher and let me know what you think of this method as well as any suggestions you have.

RECOMMENDED RESOURCES

To help make your study more effective, I will recommend some books and other items of help.

1. Barrons books seem to me to be the best because they are the closest to my system. However, even these guides still spend a lot of time on unimportant phrases and nonessential methods that make you learn things that are readily apparent to you or that you'll never need. It is their nicely simplistic breakdown of grammar rules, the categorization of subjects, and the commonly used words mini-dictionaries that make them worthy of your attention—and your funds.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

2. Berlitz books are generally pretty good as well. However, for some reason, Berlitz doesn't apply the same formula to all of its books. So, do some comparative analysis of its books for your specific language before you buy. After reading this guide, you'll know what you're looking for and how to choose the best book for you.
3. Both Barron and Berlitz use similar methods, so the key here is the language itself. As you browse through the Barron and Berlitz books, select the one that offers the simplest phrases for you to use as replies. Also look for the best breakdowns of synonyms and antonyms because these will get you further faster.
4. The other guides are all right in general, but they often leave you with more questions than answers. With some of the more exotic, non-Latin-based languages, you're going to have to go with whatever you can get your hands on. If your local bookstores don't offer much, and their clerks can't get you anything promising . . . then try accessing the Internet before settling for whatever they have to offer. In some cases, there might very well be only one book in some rare language.

If you run across this, try to get some tapes, CDs, movies, music of the language, whatever you can and use them as described earlier. Those tapes that ask you to memorize long phrases or learn phrases with little changes in them (e.g., he said, she said, I said) aren't as good. Remember, you're paying for the tape and its time is limited—you need those things in the first-person singular. If it's all you can get, take it. Also, those that repeat the same sentence more than once are wasting your money because they are cutting in half what they could put on the tape for you. That's why they make a stop and rewind button. You'll need them. Use them.

5. Another method for getting a study guide or tape is to get someone you know who can write and speak the language to make one for you. For an audiotape, provide your volunteer speaker with a recorder and tape, pay him whatever you two agree on (maybe dinner or such), and have him read English words followed by the corresponding word in the foreign language into the tape recorder. This way you are creating your own tailor-made tape with exactly what you need.

Recommend Resources

Likewise, you can make a written guide by having the person write the foreign words (better to print) beside the list of words you have copied from this guide. Then, after he has gone through the list and written the foreign words beside your English ones, you can read it to him. Have the person correct you and then write down how the correct pronunciation of that word sounds to your ears. This will give you a great guide to study and will have you speaking more correctly and quickly. You can also use your tailor-made guide as a point-and-show reference chart when you are traveling in that country. When your pronunciation is not close enough for someone to understand what you're saying, just point to the word you're trying to convey. Your partner can read it, and soon you'll be all sorted out.

LEARNING TIPS

1. Watch movies, read children's books, listen to music, and go to restaurants to get an insight into the culture and nuances of your target language.
2. A really neat trick for learning the grammar of another language is to do just like children do—get a kids' grammar book for that language. Grammar will tell you how to put the sentences together the way they do, as well as those little things you need to know for each group of words such as tense, case, and conjugation.
3. Learning adjectives and adverbs is greatly enhanced by studying them in antonym pairs.
4. Learn to use cognates to maximize your usable vocabulary.
5. Rely on synonyms to express the greatest number of ideas with the least amount of vocabulary.

The Quick & Dirty Guide to Learning Languages Fast

6. The most difficult part of communicating is listening/translating. So, slow the speaker down and repeat what he said in words you know to ensure that you understand what was said.
7. Becoming functional depends on your individual needs, goals, and interests. The focus you choose in your study will be defined by these.
8. Common nouns are easily learned by labeling these objects around your home and office.
9. You get a lot more mileage out of the verb to live than the preposition from, which usually requires more grammar.
10. Learn useful colloquial phrases and use them to supplement your basics to be more expressive.
11. In some languages, simple commands will help (e.g., tell me, show me, take me).
12. When you are struggling with a word, try using memory keys, such as how a word sounds or what it looks like or reminds you of.
13. Learn to conjugate helping verbs (to be, to do, to have, to want) and use them with infinitives and gerunds to avoid conjugating every verb.
14. If you learn to conjugate only three verbs (to be, to do, to go) properly, in past, present, and future tense for all your pronouns, you will be able to say almost anything you will ever need—if not perfectly, then at least clearly. The reason this works is because in almost every single language, when two verbs are used together, you don't conjugate the second verb. If you can only learn to conjugate one verb correctly, choose "I did."
15. A nice trick to do with present tense: use the present participle and you won't have to conjugate different verbs. In English, the present participle is formed by using a helping verb and adding ing to the main verb (I am reading). Other languages may form the present participle in different ways or call it something else, but they all have a similar shortcut you can use.
16. Learn I will and put this with the infinitive (to + a verb, as explained in the section on verbs) to solve most of your problems (I will meet).

APPENDIX: REPRODUCIBLE FORMS

On the following two pages are the workbook forms that were used throughout this book. The first form is useful for words and phrases the second is intended to help with conjugation of verbs. You can photocopy these forms, and then fill in the category at the top—e.g., key nouns, verb to be conjugated, or letter of the alphabet (or situation for non-Latin based languages) for that day's vocabulary expansion. If you wish, you can place the forms in your notebook and fill them out on the days indicated in the book.

CATEGORY:[illegible]

VERB TO BE CONJUGATED:

PRONOUN	VERB OR VERB PHRASE	VERB/PHRASE IN TARGET LANGUAGE	PRONUCIATION GUIDE
I
You
You (f)
He She
It
We
You (p)
They

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Alexander Hawke has been rated in seven languages by the Defense Language Tests using this method. He has served more than a dozen years in the U.S. Army with the cavalry, Rangers, and Special Forces, and has six military occupational skills, three of which are in Special Forces. He is a black belt in aikido and an avid outdoor enthusiast. He has been featured on MTV and has lectured for the Congress of Solutions for Disasters.